

Faith That Can Move Mountains (Matt. 21:20-22) 10/29/2017

Introduction

A fruit tree's primary purpose is to bear fruit, and it is therefore judged by what it _____ and not by how it _____.

Fruit is always an indication of _____, of a transformed life in which the _____ of God is operating.

This tree with leaves, but no fruit, was a case of false _____, which Jesus was using as an illustration of _____ in religion.

The fig tree represented spiritually _____ Israel, its leaves represented Israel's _____ religiousness, and its lack of fruit represented Israel's spiritual _____.

Nothing is so obvious as the truth that religious _____ without spiritual _____ are worthless.

How Did This Happen?

Notes on the disciples seeing the fig tree:

Amazed =

Matthew uses this word to describe the _____ impact on the disciples.

Some of the ways in which this word 'amazed' is used:

Notes on the disciples' question:

By Faith

The Lord took the opportunity to teach them about the power of _____ joined to the purpose and _____ of God, which can do far more than instantly wither a fig tree.

Faith =

Do not doubt =

Notes about this mountain:

What Did Jesus Mean?

It is a figure of speech meaning that seemingly _____ things are possible through the _____ of God, when the people of God take Him at His word and _____ in a believing way.

The requirement for receiving is to ask in Jesus' name, which means according to His _____ and _____.

The Jewish religious system was _____ picked up and thrown down with Jesus' death and resurrection, and _____ thrown down in A.D. 70.

No _____ should be able to stand before a confiding faith in God.

This presupposes that the thing requested is actually God's will—for only _____-given faith is _____-free.

Mountain moving faith is _____, undoubting, and unqualified _____ in God.

When a believer seeks something that is _____ with God's Word and trusts in God's power to _____ it, Jesus assures him that his request will be honored, because it _____ Him and His Father.